

5/21/15

Will Klipstine-

Mr...Will...Klipstine. Well well well. I have to say in my career I haven't written many of these. I have no problem giving this letter of endorsement because I'm so proud of what you've done here. And yes it would be nice to meet you some day as well, sir. Perhaps at the premiere?

I have many turned down pages on your script and about 99% of them have LOL and exclamation points on them. The other 1% is just a formatting question here and there, which is of course subjective.

I know and love Mel and perhaps I've just committed sacrilege, but this really rings the Mel Brooks bell.

Very, Very, Very funny! This is insane and wonderful. The laughs never stop. What an ending! Perfect!

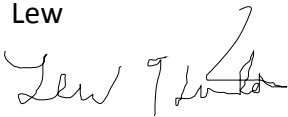

Will, what a ride you will take an audience on! The heart and intent behind your story combined with the solid structure has set you up for success.

I am not a businessman nor will I ever be. I don't get involved with pitching movies to people but you may use my strongest endorsement with any of my colleagues in the industry, which is, well everyone. The people in the industry who know me well know I rarely give strong endorsements, and almost never as strong as this one.

Let me end this letter by saying you have yourself a hit on your hands, my good sir.

Write on,

Lew

A handwritten signature in cursive script, appearing to read "Lew Kline". The signature is written in black ink and is positioned below the printed name "Lew".